Renowned poet, activist passes away at age 86

By Hillel Italie

NEW YORK — Maya Angelou's story awed millions. A childhood victim of rape, she broke through silence and shame to tell her tale in one of the most widely read memoirs of the 20th century. A black woman born into poverty and segregation, she recited the most popular presidential inaugural poem in history. "I'm not modest," she said in 2013. "I have no modesty. Modesty is a learned behavior. But I do pray for humility, because humility comes

Teacher raise proposal on table

GOP plan would boost wages, but some call price too high

By Emery P. Dalesio
The Associated Press

RALEIGH — A proposed state budget for the year starting in July would include pay raises of more than 10 percent for veteran teachers who relinquish job protections a court says lawmakers can't strip away, Senate leaders said Wednesday.

Republican legislative leaders and Gov. Pat McCrory promised in February that they would commit about $200 million over the next two years to raise pay for early-career teachers from $30,800 a year to $35,000.

Senators said they would go further by spending up to $468 million next year alone and offer bigger raises to teachers who voluntarily give up job protections. Principals and other school administrators would receive an average 2 percent raise while other school employees would get a flat $500, Senate leader Phil Berger said.

Berger declined to say where the extra money for raises would come from, saying it would be outlined when their proposed budget was unveiled later Wednesday.

Teacher salaries have been stuck since 2008 except for a 1.2 percent increase in 2012.

The Senate's determination to dissolve tenure protections in return for better pay won't help attract and retain bright

Despite her international recognition and success at crafting literary prose, the late Maya Angelou was still a master of everyday talk. "She was down to Earth and full of wisdom," said Burlington resident Renee Donnell, who met Angelou in 2009. "Sitting down and talking to her, I was nervous and excited at the same time. She talked to me like we were having a regular conversation. She asked about with questions and concerns about the farm's operations. "How, exactly, is it going to positively impact the community?" said Debbie Newell, who helped organize the meeting. "We feel like we can't be safe in our community."

BENEVOLENCE FARM RECENTLY purchased a three-bedroom house at 4265 Thompson Mill Road, after 11 acres of nearby land was donated to the organization. The home will initially house four women recently released from prison who are interested in rehabilitating their lives, Jisa said. The organization's leaders intend to expand the facility to house no more than 12 women. While on the property, they will spend 25 hours a week out in the field growing produce and 15 hours learning job or educational skills. The farm's leaders are currently holding work days once a month to prepare the property for the women, who may begin arriving by early next year.

With more than 2,600 women exiting prisons in North Carolina, including 48 Alamance County residents, there is a need for this type of service because, Jisa said, if these recent inmates are not helped, more than two-thirds are rearrested. The
